Los Angeles Times Service LOS ANGELES - With the 984 Summer Games now over, Olympic officials will be turning their attention to the boycotts that have marred the last three Games. Their deliberations in the coming months will be serious, and many observers are asking whether the world Olympic movement has reached a turning point.

Officials from the primary international sport federations and national Olympic committees will seek ways to prevent future boycotts. Specifically, they will discuss whether the IOC should adopt sanctions against future boycotting countries.

So while there may be immediate drama, many IOC insiders believe the more likely prospect is continued uncertainty over what to do about disruptive politics and IOC

According to this view, the IOC may not be able to deal with the South Korean government.

That statement was intended to end the confusion on the tax issue that has been troubling the Reagan campaign. It apparently did little, however, to clarify the issue for the Republican platform committee.

Mr. Lewis gave copies of the Reagan statement to key members of the committee as they met for the first time before the Republican convention next week in Dallas. Mr. Lewis later said that, if the platform language went beyond Mr. Reagan's statement, "the president would have to repudiate the platform."

However, neither the Reagan statement nor Mr. Lewis' comment stopped conservatives on the committee from trying to include a to-tal ban on higher taxes in the plat-

Mr. Kemp predicted that his side would win the platform committee fight. But Senator Robert J. Dole of Kansas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said, "Some of us are trying to protect the presi-

My opponent has spent his political life supporting more taxes and more spending. For him, raising taxes is a first resort. For me, it is a last resort."

The president's 19-day vacation, due to end Wednesday, has been marked by what his managers consider a period of drift, particularly on the tax issue.

After last year's election, which preceded the coup led by Major General Mohammed Buhari by only four months, important factions in Kaduna became dissatisfied with Mr. Shagari and Mr. Dikko, according to Christian and Moslem former officials in the Shagari government.

In setting up the National Union for Independence and Revolution Party, which is more representative than the now-dissolved Northern-dominated Chadian National Liberation Front, the analysts said Mr. Habré would raise his standing in the South and reinforce his claim to be the leader of all Chad.

Reconciliation talks aimed at ending the 18-year civil war are due to be held in Brazzaville, Congo, but are unlikely to take place as long as Mr. Habre insists he is the country's national leader and not the head of one of its warring factions, the analysts said. In Paris, French officials said

Police in U.K. Battle Miners To Defend

United Press International LONDON — Police battled Monday with picketing miners who turned out in the thousands to block colleagues from returning to work as Britain's coal strike entered its 23d week.

About 50 miners were arrested and two policemen were injured in clashes involving about 5,000 min-ers in the counties of Derbyshire, Yorkshire and Nottinghamshire.

A London radio station said the miners "went on the rampage, smashing windows, uprooting fences and stoning police."

Britain's miners walked out in mid-March to protest the plans of the state-run National Coal Board to close 20 unprofitable pits with a loss of about 20,000 jobs.

The dispute split the union, and about 60,000 of the country's 174,000 miners have continued working at 40 of 174 mines.

The coal board said the highest number of miners reported for work Monday in the Scottish coal-fields since the strike began. It said 89 miners faced angry picket lines to report to work. The National Union of Mineworkers put the number at 71.

"The board has exaggerated the figures, as usual," said the union's vice president, Mick McGahey.

Asked if he was worried about what many newspapers said was a slow return to work by strikers, Mr. McGahey said: "It concerns me, of course, but don't forget that an overwhelming 90 percent of the manpower remain solidly behind the strike."

British industrial output fell 3 percent in the second quarter of the year, according to the central sta-tistical office. Officials estimate that the mine strike cost the country 3.5 percent of its industrial output in June, similar to the previous month's figure.

"The strike has cost us considerable money," a coal board spokes-woman said. "We had to flood a Derbyshire mine where a fire broke out and have lost 3 million pounds [about $4 million] worth of equip-ment. That is a direct result of this

She said a further £20 million was spent in seven other mines that had to be flooded. Fires can easily break out in mines that have not been maintained, she said.

Pakistan Accuses Afghans in Attack

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) - Three Afghan aircraft bombed a Pakistani village on Monday, kiling one man and wounding five women, a Pakistani Foreign Ministry spokesman said. The Foreign Ministry protested to the Afghan charge d'affaires in Islamabad, the spokesman

The spokesman said the Afghan aircraft entered the Kurram area of Pakistan, close to the Afghan border, 185 miles (300 kilometers) southwest of Islamabad. "The aircraft penetrated 12 miles into the Pakistani territory," the spokesman said, dropping bombs and firing rockets at Kum Alizai.

The incident took place only days before Pakistan and the United Nations are scheduled to resume talks in Geneva on solving the Afghan Problem. The talks have remained deadlocked since June 1983. The Afghan charge d'affaires was informed that such incidents "on the eye of Indiana talks layer this month between Pakistan and Afghanistan under indirect talks later this month between Pakistan and Afghanistan, under UN auspices at Geneva, could not but vitiate the atmosphere."

Estonian Minister Defects in Sweden

STOCKHOLM (Combined Dispatches) — The deputy minister of justice of the Soviet republic of Estonia has defected to the West and is seeking political asylum in Sweden, Swedish officials said Monday. The deputy minister is believed to be the highest-ranking Estonian to defect.

Meanwhile, five East Europeans crossed into West Germany, West German police said Monday. They included a Soviet citizen who fled from Czechoslovakia, the first time a Soviet citizen escaped through Czechoslovakia in 11 years, police said.

Six Albanians are reported to have fled abroad by swimming — three to Greece, one of whom was lost at sea, and three to Yugoslavia. In Athens, two sisters said they swam all night from Albania's Adriatic coast to the Greek island of Corfu on Aug. 2 and lost their brother on the way. In Belgrade, the magazine Duga said three men swam for five hours from Lake Ohrid's Albanian shore to Yugoslavia on July 17. (UPI, Reuters)

BEIRUT (UPI) — The government Monday called off a meeting of the cabinet that was to have dealt with political changes and Israeli-occupied southern Lebanon.

"The cabinet secretary, Chefik Mneimeh, has announced the cancellation of Tuesday's extraordinary Cabinet meeting." Beirut radio said. No official reason was given. The discussion of political changes outlined by two Lebanese peace conferences in Switzerland this past year is considered vital if Beirut's July 4 cease-fire is to be translated into lasting peace.

A political source said Walid Jumblat, minister of tourism and public works and leader of the Druze Moslem militia, "said he was sick and could not come." Beirut's Anwar newspaper speculated that the departure Sunday of a key Christian cabinet member, Camille Chamoun, for a vacation in Scotland "would delay the opening."

Repay Debt Slower, Brazilian Urges

BRASILIA (UPI) — Trancredo Neves, the presidential nominee of Brazil's largest opposition party, is urging that Brazil cut back on payments of its $95-billion foreign debt, the world's largest.

Mr. Neves, the governor of Minas Gerais state, pledged to bring debt payments to the nation's international creditors "in line with Brazil's ability to pay" after winning the nomination of the Brazilian Democratic Movement party in a vote Sunday. Brazil has debt amortization and interest bills of about $20 billion this year compared with $25 billion in projected export carnings.

The Vatican order came in reply to a statement by Fernando Cardenal, a Jesuit, that the church had never expressed formal opposition to his appointment as education

However, the Valtican statement noted that Jesuit authorities warned Fernando Cardenal in July that he faced "most painful" consequences if he took the job. The statement said the Vatican was in "full accord" with that warning. The priests "could be reduced to lay status," a Vatican official told The Associated Press.

The Vatican said its policy had been known to the priests since the issue first came up in 1979. A temporary truce was reached in 1981 when Nicaraguan church authorities said the priests could serve in the government as long as they did not perform important church functions, such as saying Mass or administering sacraments.

Since then, however, the govern-ment's relations with the church have deteriorated badly. Pope John Paul II was jeered when he visited the country in March 1983 and 10 foreign priests were expelled by the government last month.

In San Salvador, meanwhile, Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Da-mas, head of El Salvador's Roman Catholic Church, referred to the Vatican order in his Sunday sermon and called on all priests to "outdated information and misin- sever links with leftist guerrilla mo-

Early U.S. Plan for Satellite Weapon Seen Similar to Current Soviet Model

The old weapon, now that it is developed and in Soviet hands, is Union, whose version of the weap-being held up by President Ronald on is very similar to the original air Reagan as one reason for not signing a treaty with the Soviet Union to ban anti-satellite weapons. The Soviets are way ahead of us in that field," Mr. Reagan said at a news conference on June 14. "They've been at this for about 10 years or more. And we are just in the field of beginning research."

But a recently declassified air force document shows that the United States started worrying about how to knock satellites down as soon as the Soviet Union put the first one in space in 1957. The United States burst ahead with one idea after another, but kept most of them on paper, while the Soviet Union stuck to a concept considered earlier by the air force until they had the hardware flying.

The United States appears to be far ahead on tomorrow's technology, but the Soviet Union has an anti-satellite weapon ready today.

"When the Soviet Union began orbiting live-ton spacecraft during 1960-61, it seemed to many in the air force that the nation faced a real danger in the form of Russian satellites used for reconnaissance, communications, early warning and possibly bombardment," says the recently declassified account, cleared for the public version of an official history, "The Air Force in Space, Fiscal Year 1961."

"Studies to counter the last of these possibilities had been initiated by the air force as early as 1956," it says. However, it was not until 1959 that it proposed to the office of the secretary of defense a concrete plan for what was called the Satellite Intercept and Inspection

The Pentagon's research office in June 1960 gave its go-ahead to the satellite intercept plan, with the proviso that it was a demonstration project, not a commitment to produce and deploy the weapon. "The original air force concept."

But his administration went on to more promising anti-satellite ideas. One limitation of the probetter, the type of anti-satellite gram was that it could not turn to the right or left to inspect something out of its orbit.

> This did not deter the Soviet force blueprint. The Soviet weapon has been tested by launching one satellite and sending a hunter-killer satellite that apparently detonates explosives near the target.

U.S. defense leaders have said the Soviet anti-satellite weapon is now operational and a threat to low-altitude U.S. satellites.

U.S. Air Force anti-satellite efforts today are concentrated on a more versatile satellite killer. The new idea is to send an F-15 fighter to a high altitude, where it would shoot a rocket-propelled weapon at a satellite in space.

This satellite killer homes in on the heat of its target and destroys it through collision, not by setting off

It has been flight-tested once and is scheduled to be flown again. Pentagon leaders consider it better than the Soviet Union's, but they complain that the air force is letting the program lag by refusing to divert money from such projects as fighter planes, bombers and mis-

Pakistan Leaders Renew Demand for Elections

KARACHI, Pakistan - Pakistani politicians opposed to army rule ended a two-day clandestine meeting Monday and demanded general elections in 90 days, the resignation of President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq and transfer of power to elected representatives, their spokesman said. General Zia has promised elections by March

Fatehyab Ali Khan, who opened the conference of the 11 parties represented in the Movement for the Restoration of Democracy, said the meeting was held in secret to avoid arrest under martial law, which bans political meetings. The movement began a civil disobedience campaign last year to press for general elections. The campaign set off agitation during which at least

On Sunday, after four previous meetings, the two parties agreed to set up temporary parliamentary committees on finance and foreign affairs to serve until a new government is formed. ing future Olympic hosts. This sounds to some IOC mem-

"The IOC would be in danger of falling captive to bloc politics if there's a veto power," said Niko laos Nissiotis, a representative of Greece. And Sir Lance Cross declared: "It would defeat the whole purpose of the Olympic movement, of spreading the Olympics to all areas. The members as a whole must be free, by majority vote, to choose the sites they want."

A proposal often heard from outside the IOC, but almost never from inside it, is that a permanent neutral site be chosen for the Games. The one most frequently mentioned is Greece.

There appears, however, no prospect of this proposal being adopted. The consensus is that Greece is not a suitable permanent site because of its wide ideological swings from right to left, its civil war and recent rule by a military junta, and its poor relations with Turkey.

It is also argued that one of the strengths of the Olympic move-ment has been that it has gone or ultimately will go into every populated corner of the world. Those holding this view point to Los Angeles to demonstrate that the Games continue to gain devoted adherents, generate regional interest in little-known sports and enhance the quality of public sports

These considerations have al-, ways been important to IOC members, who have consistently sent the Games to new sites when possible.

The IOC has committed itself informally to taking the Games to Athens in 1996, the centennial year of the modern Olympics. But already, in the lobby and corridors of the Biltmore, the IOC headquarters hotel in Los Angeles, there has been talk about Beijing holding the Games in the year 2000.

It would be in accord with IOC traditions. The Chinese, from what they have said here, are thinking they have said here, are thinking they have said here, are thinking they have said here.

they have said here, are thinking about it seriously.

The bottom line of the Olympic movement's political problems is probably reflected in the paradox that dominates the movement:

That an athletic competition dedicated by its founder, Baron Pierre de Couberin of France, and its subsequent leaders to forwarding international peace and harmony has often been a catalyst to nationintroversy.

As, Romanians and a grant of internationalities did the same. Many local members concede in private that as long as the Games inspire, such strong national feelings they are likely to be an arena of internative and even conflict.

Russians and Germans

The last time East Germany got into a is now well beyond the level of ripples, as the public argument with the Soviet Union, in invective in the official press demonstrates. 1971, the issue was detente. The Soviets wanted to move several degrees toward better relations with the West; Walter Ulbricht, the elderly Stalinist who ran East Germany, was resisting and making trouble for them. The Soviets solved it by removing Mr. Ulbricht and replacing him with Erich Honecker.

Now the Honecker government is hard at work on its own initiative improving its connections with West Germany, and it is moving at a speed that has evidently raised in the Soviets' minds a terrible doubt about whether they are fully in control of events there.

In 1971 the negotiations were broadly be-tween East and West. The Soviet Union and the United States, dealing directly with each other, were setting the terms in which other discussions proceeded among Europeans. This time it is just the opposite. While the atmo-sphere has deteriorated between the Soviets and the Americans, it has warmed remarkably between the two Germanys. In each, the government has its own reasons for wishing to demonstrate that its purposes are not wholly determined by its larger ally.

That creates ripples of uneasiness in the West, as people wonder where this interesting process is leading. In the East, the uneasiness

It was the Soviets who began this process of playing on the ties between the two Germanys.

with the thought of gradually drawing the Federal Republic away from NATO. Things have not worked out that way, and the present activity among the Germans catches the Soviets at a bad time. Their campaign against the emplacement of the NATO missiles was unsuccessful, and they are now evidently trying to reorganize their European policy. Meanwhile the various contradictory things they have said about missiles, both NATO's and their own, appear to have rattled people more severely in Eastern Europe than in the West.

Perhaps it is an exaggeration to call the political situation in Moscow an interregrum, but the inconsistencies among Soviet state-ments hint that no one person is fully in charge of policy on this most sensitive of subjects. A debate of substantial dimensions seems to be going on. The West Germans have invited Mr. Honecker to visit his boyhood home in the Saarland next month. He would be the first East German leader to visit West Germany. Whether the visit actually takes place will be a crucial indicator of the latitude the Soviets are prepared to extend to the East Germans.

Some Censor Concerts

The point of international cultural exchange, we thought, was to display a national culture at its best. That purpose was betrayed by the New York Philharmonic when it initially agreed to eliminate a piece from a planned concert program in Malaysia because the mu-sic had "Jewish elements." After a chorus of criticism, the Philharmonic decided to do the right thing and cancel the Malaysian concerts rather than submit to censorship.

Malaysia, a predominantly Moslem country, has an official policy banning the presentation of "works of Jewish origin." The Malaysian ear is indeed discriminating. It can tolerate works by such American Jewish conductated the submitted of the s posers as Leonard Bernstein, Aaron Copland, and George Gershwin, but cannot accept a piece by Ernest Bloch entitled "Schelomo," Solomon. In truth, the problem appears to be less the music than its unabashed subtitle: "A Hebrew Rhapsody for Cello and Orchestra." For the orchestra to bend its standards to such bigotry would have been truly tasteless.

What justification could there be for an American cultural institution to accommodate such rank cultural censorship? To do this in the name of representing American culture abroad would only have compounded the offense.

Malaysia's government is not alone in trying to restrict what its citizens can see and hear, and Jewish artists are not alone as targets. From South Africa to the Soviet Union, ideological and ethnic tests are all too common.

The only proper answer to such cultural censorship is a principled refusal to go along. The point was well made a few years ago by none other than Zubin Mehta, music director of the Israel Philharmonic as well as the New York Philharmonic, who challenged an Israeli ban on playing the works of Richard Wagner, the German composer much favored by Hitler.

Art, diplomacy, and decency are best served by the answer the New York Philharmonic finally gave to Malaysia: Accept the universality of culture, or lose the concert.

The Germanys: Trying Reunification on the Sly . . .

LONDON — The superpowers have at last found common ground. Each is worried about The German Problem.

The Kremlin, or at least its ultra-hawk faction, has been assailing the moves taken by East Germany to improve relations with the Germans on the other side of the Iron Curtain. In the past year 27,000 East Germans have been given permission to move West; next month the East German leader, Erich Honecker, is planning that puppet state's first visit to the prosperous side of Germany.

Moscow originally approved of this ap-proach to the West, as part of its campaign to seduce Europe into rejecting the American-made nuclear missiles. When that seduction failed and West Germany began to put in place the West's answer to the huge escalation of Russian arms, Moscow expected East Germany to fall into its new hard line - the present supersulk that is supposed to help defeat Rouald Resgan in November.

But the East Germans, normally most subservient to orders from Moscow, are pressing ahead with their Western contacts, testing the limits of Soviet ire or exploiting a division in the Kremlin's constantly moribund inner circle. The Soviet leaders suspect that the East and West Germans are plotting "revanchism"

By William Safire

a movement to restore the old German borders and take back areas that the Russians chopped off after World War II.

Meanwhile, back in Washington, the State and Commerce Departments are trying to get a grip on The German Problem: the near-billion-dollar credits extended by West Germany to the Communist regime in the east and the trans-shipment of the most sophisticated American technology to East Germany.

Two years ago, while the State Department was caving in to European demands that U.S. equipment be used in the Soviet-European gas pipeline, America was assured that West Germans would guard against the transfer of U.S. industrial secrets to the Communist bloc. But it turns out that Secretary George Shultz preparing laws to forbid their companies from going along with U.S. export restric-tions. Thus, West Germany sticks its thumb in the eye of the Western superpower (which only a conservative, NATO-dutiful govern-ment could do), while East Germany apparently sticks its thumb in the eye of the Eastern superpower (which only a staunchly Communist, repressive regime could do).

Why are these events taking place at the same time? The answer should be obvious: 40. years after the war, two generations after the division of the Third Reich by the victorious allies, German leaders of East and West are beginning to put on the pressure to reunite their country. Nobody wants to admit this, of course. Germans talk only of "ultimate" reunification in some happy time of universal peace, because they know that the very prospect of one Germany soon erodes their credibility as allies to opposing sides.

The Russians, if this goes too far, will crack down on East Germany as they did on Poland; 20 Russian divisions are present on East German soil. The Americans, if Chancellor Helmut Kohl continues to finance and technologically bolster the Communist regime, was snookered; the West Germans are now will react by passing the Nunn amendment, and the withdrawal of U.S. forces will begin. That is why East Germans are talking to Moscow merely of detente, which is occasionally in favor, and why West Germans talk to America of the virtues of trade and human America of the virtues of trade and noman communication, which Americans are usually for. Their game is to begin the reunification process without ever calling it that.

German nationalism seems to mean more to Mr. Honecker than continued subservience to Moscow, and more to Mr. Kohl than the present generation's method of defending Western Europe. A decade from now we will learn of the secret negotiations in these years that took place between Germans who put Fatherland ahead of ideology. It should not be a surprise; it is only natural.

Would a reunited, neutralist Germany be a useful buffer between superpowers - or a way for the Russians to get the Americans out of Europe? Would it revive the nationalist spirit that led to two world wars? Bom's leaders are deluding themselves. The public irritation that Moscow is showing at the increased contact may be deceptive. Reunified. Germany would be stripped of its Western protection. It would be at the mercy of the superpower that is unafraid to impose its will.

Or Just Another Maneuver Along the Eastern Front?

BRUSSELS — Can there be anything new on the Eastern front? The current quarrel between the Soviet Union and East Germany might be preparing a Communist bloc crisis.

Or it might be just another routine spat in a "family of nations" that is less united than

"This war," Stalin told Tito in 1945, "is unlike the wars of the past in that anyone who occupies a territory imposes his social system upon it." Forty years later there is no question but that Stalin was right.

What mattered then in the occupied territories is what matters now. The three keys are absolute Kremlin control over relations between East and West, priority of Soviet interests over those of sister countries and control of each country by the Communist Party.

There has always been some bending of the rules, even under Stalin. Churches in Poland and East Germany have maintained some influence, for example, and so have satellite non-Communist parties. "Parliaments" and "presidents" kept their roles, to provide the illusion of a certain amount of pluralism.

In the period between Khrushchev and Chernenko, the Kremlin began to understand that the rules would have to be bent some more and that this would be all to the good, since these additional deviations would serve only to help assure the stability of the three ntial elements of control.

By Leopold Unger

The Russians realize that stereotyped reactions to individual national phenomena are no longer possible. They can, of course, react the same way to imminent danger, as they did when they invaded Hungary in 1956 and Czechoslovakia in 1968. They have learned, though, to tolerate the occasional "ideological outrage," since it can act as a safety valve and help to prevent new "Polish situations."

All the leaders of Eastern states agree that the essential thing is to hold on to power and to maintain that of the Communist Party.

This is the nature of the regime — despotic, rife with nepotism, but provisionally stable—that Stalin imposed on Romania. This is why the Kremlin has tolerated what it sees as the extravagant behavior of Nicolae Ceansescu the untouchable president of that country. In Hungary, "peaceful coexistence within a framework of indifference," as the relationship between party and citizenry has been called, has enabled Janos Kadar to carry out his economic reforms and flirt with the West, televising the Los Angeles Games and tolerat-ing the presence in Hungary for a few days of correspondents from Radio Free Europe. And it was the certainty that General Woj-ciech Jaruzelski would manage the Polish problem without a very risky intervention by the Red Army that convinced the Kremlin to be patient during the 16 months when Solidarity broke every Communist taboo.

So it is normal for the Kremlin not to ignore the sentiment that all Germans share of belonging to the same nation, and their wish to profit from that situation.

By letting Erich Honecker visit Bonn, the Kremlin would compensate somewhat for the

It is normal for Moscow not to ignore sentiment that all Germans share of belonging to one nation.

humiliation the East Germans suffered through the Moscow-imposed boycott of the Olympics. There is also the fact that the special status of East Germany is such that West Germany bears some of the economic burden of running the Soviet empire.

What about the recent Pravda articles criticizing inter-German relations? Some observers have read them as a sign of the Kremlin's disapproval of Mr. Honecker. Others see evidence of a power struggle within the East German regime. Others diagnose physical fangue in the Kremlin's old men. There may be or the first such quarrel in the East.

As recently as last spring, the issue of priority of individual national interests over those of the "socialist family" gave rise to a press debate that pitted the Hungarian and East German media against those of Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union.

Moreover, the Kremlin does not need Pravda to criticize Mr. Honecker. The Pravda articles were addressed not to him but rather to all those in East and West Germany who might be tempted to believe that the current differences could threaten what the Kremlin regards as its fundamental interests.

Pravda does not dictate diplomatic conduct to Mr. Honecker, Mr. Kadar or Mr. Ceauses-cu. It does point out limits to all those on both sides of the Iron Curtain whose hopes are exaggerated. The taboos remain. There is no deviation from the rules in the ruling caste. Mr. Honecker is as German in 1984 as General Jaruzelski was Polish in 1981. For Moscow in 1984, European reality, and German reality in particular, is division, not reunification. It is wall, not bridge. Analysts have been saying that Stalin is back in style. But with the Red Army in East Germany, in Poland and elsewhere, the Stalin style has been there all along.

Other Opinion

A German Test for the Kremlin

In the past, Moscow tacitly encouraged rapprochement between the two Germanys because, for one thing, the Kremlin thought it would fan neutralism in West Germany and disrupt the unity of NATO. Another reason was that the Soviet Union could obtain through East Germany the superior industrial products and technologies of Western Europe. Moscow has suddenly changed this policy. Why? It is probably because the rapprochement between the two Germanys has gone vond what Moscow can tolerate.

The most surprising thing about recent developments is that East Germany, far from being cowed by Moscow's expressions of displeasure, has shown an attitude of defiance. Hungary has voiced support for the East Germans. Undeniably, the Soviet Union's influence over the countries of Eastern Europe has sunk low. How will the Kremlin handle the situation? It is an even greater test for the Soviet leadership than Poland.

- The Daily Yomiuri (Tokyo).

These accusations of "revanchism" entail a degree of risk for Moscow, for ecor : nic considerations and the need to hold the East bloc together mean that an open breach with East Germany must be avoided except as a last resort. The recent clear evidence of discord in Eastern Europe has tempted some people to exaggerated speculation that the Democratic Republic may be aiming at emancipation from the Soviet yoke. But nobody really knows how much latitude Moscow can afford to allow or. more important still, how far the Democratic Republic's rulers can go in that direction with-out undermining their own internal position. - Neue Zürcher Zeitung (Zurich).

These Women's Games Weren't Play

LOS ANGELES — The instant
Joan Benoit burst from the entry tunnel into Los Angeles Memorial Coliscum on Aug. 5 — her cap brim cocked up, her legs pumping, her face stilled into the fierce concentration that had carried her over 26 miles - there were women in America who knew that for the rest of their lives they would never see another moment quite like this. Amy Rennert, editor of Women's Sports and Fitness Magazine, darted across the press box in tears and hugged one of her writers. Pat Connolly, a three-time Olympian pentathlete, watched on television and felt her throat close with emotion -"for Joan," she said later, still moved by the memory. "For women. For my daughter."

With 75,000 spectators on their feet to cheer her on, Benoit won the first women's marathon in Olympic history and ducked her head in delight as she sped into a victory lap. She was still hearing the cheers when Gabrielle Andersen-Schiess, a Swiss runner, lurched in. Then Rennert turned away and Connolly began shouting at the television screen. "Hang on," Connolly cried. "Finish! You can do it! Hang on!" If professionals had scripted women's full arrival into the international athletic arena, they might have done no better than the ex-

women's marathon. With Benoit hausted Andersen-Schiess dragging gamely toward the finish like a wounded animal, women suddenly looked capable of taking on nearly everything competition could demand, from breathtaking effort to almost unendurable pain. The suddenly celebrated faces of Benoit and Andersen-Schiess were only two of a collection without precedent in the Olympic Games. America was cheering Flora Hyman, the 30-year-old, 6-foot-5 volleyball player, and Cheryl Miller, the 6-foot-2 basketball forward. There was cyclist Connie Carpenter-Phinney, winning the gold in the first women's Olympic bicycle race. And gymnast Mary Lou Retton, winning the gold with routines of such ferocious strength that her coach declared afterward. The butterfly's time is over. No more butterflies in gymnastics." The list of women's names goes on and on — through diving, sprinting, swim-ming, shooting, even coaching and working as referee. "It is remarkable," said Eva Auchincless, executive director of the Women's Sports Foundation, set up by women athletes 10 years ago to help promote sports opportuni-ties for women. "What amazes me —I suppose it shouldn't amaze me, but it does — is how many people are zeroing in and noticing the man and have children."

I have been so incredibly proud of these women and their perfor-mances that it brings tears to my eyes to even think of it."

The timing for many women rushing home to their television sets, was exhilarating. Women are storming national politics in America this summer, long-delayed bills addressing pension disparities and lapsed child-support payments are passing without opposition; Demo-crats and Republicans alike are furiously courting the women's vote, and just the sight of the new Democratic vice presidential nominee is stirring crowds across the country.

"My reaction was very similar to what I feit when Geraldine Ferraro was nominated," Rennert said, remembering the pride she felt when Benoit flung her arms up at the marathon finish line. "It was really not a patriotic feeling. That was not it at all. It was just this sense of -

we really can do anything."
Pat Connolly said: "I got into Olympic Village one day, and [bas-ketball center] Anne Donovan walked by, and Cheryl Miller. And they were big, and happy, and proud to be there.

In Defense of the 1960s Regarding two opinion columns on the Nixon presidency (Aug. 8 and 9) by Raymond K. Price Jr...

Mr. Price finds the 1960s to have been the "second most disastrous de-cade in U.S. history, following only the 1860s, ravaged by an actual civil war." The 1770s were pretty bad, too, for the government in power, yet what came forth was all right.

The 1860s war was necessary because a part of the nation was willing to break the nation apart in order to keep what it had. Yet from that terri-

FUTURES AND OPTIONS

Options Spreads Provide Strategy in Volatile Market

By H.J. MAIDENBERG

International Herald Tribune

EW YORK - Just before the stock market exploded two weeks ago, many pension fund and other institutional portions managers had been shifting out of cash and stocks and into bonds. They wanted to lock in the high yields on bonds. Besides, the stock market was dull, perhaps because they had been unloading equities for months.

When the stock market surged, however, many fund managers were able to quickly reverse course - without unloading bonds - thanks to spreading operations involving Treasury bond options, as well as by using the bond futures also traded on the Chicago Board of Trade.

While the use of bond futures to hedge positions in the fixed investors willing to income securities market is old hat, options spreading is more practical for both hedging and, equally important to bond investors, profitably controlling the volatility factor in this market.

Basically, a spread involves the simultaneous buying of equal amounts of calls and puts in the options market. Calls give investors the right to buy the underlying securities at a specified price within a fixed period of time. Puts are the right to sell them under the same conditions. The cost of the options, or rights, is termed the premium. In either case, investors need not exercise the rights if they become

But spreads are not just for hedgers, or those who can't make up their mind about which way the bond market will go," said Jack A. Barbanel, first vice president and director of futures and options trading at Gruntal & Co. "Spreads also can be used profitably by investors willing to take a stand in the market."

If, for example, the bond investor is bullish, Mr. Barbanel said, he could buy Treasury bond calls at a higher premium and sell calls at a lower price. Or he could buy puts with a lower premium, while selling puts with a higher premium.

Mr. Barbanel made up the following example of a "bull spread" that was predicated on December Treasury bond futures, upon which the options are based, trading at 75. Actually, December bond futures closed last Friday at 65 3/32 and the premium on the December 64 call was 2 22/32. The December 64 puts closed at 1 22/32.

UPPOSE in October the December Treasury bond call, with a strike price of 78, was trading at 24/64, each worth $15.63, and the premium for the option was $375, he said. Assume further that the bullish investor simultaneously sold a December 80 call at 8/64 and got the $125 premium. In this example, the difference between the $375 premium cost and the $125 premium income would be $250, which would be the maximum risk, plus transaction costs.

If in November, when the December bond options expire, bond futures are trading at 80, Mr. Barbanel added, "we can assume from past experience that the call premium would be worth $2,000, or 2 full points; the December 80 calls that were sold would be worthless because the person who bought wouldn't exercise a profitless option."

The profit on this operation would be $1,750, less transaction costs. "In this example of a profitable bull spread, the risk-reward ratio was 7-to-1," he noted, "because the maximum risk was $250 and the maximum profit was $1,750. The breakeven point, based on bond futures, was 78 8/32.

Had bond prices fallen, the maximum loss on the spread would have been $250, the premium outlay on the 78 call, which would have been worthless at expiration. As for the 80 call that was sold, the buyer would exercise, and thus the $2,000 premium income

For bearish investors in this scenario, Mr. Barbanel offered the following strategy: Again suppose it is October and the December Treasury bond futures are trading at 78. A bearish investor would sell a December 74 call at, say, 4 14/64 a premium of, say, $4,219. At the same time, the investor could buy a December 76 call at 2 40/64 for a premium outlay of $2,625. The investor would be shead $1,594 (the $4,219 premium he received, less the $2,625 premium paid).

Stauffer Settles With SEC

Company Sued Over Accounting

WASHINGTON - Stauffer Chemical Co. on Monday settled a suit brought by the Securities and Exchange Commission in which the company was charged with overstating its 1982 earnings by $31.1 million.

The company settled the suit by agreeing to restate its financial reports for 1982 and 1983 and to refrain from violating federal securities laws. Stanffer neither admitted nor denied the allegations.

The SEC complaint charged that the Westport, Connecticut-based concern increased its 1982 earnings by using accounting methods that were not generally accepted by the accounting industry.

The case grew out of a program to police the accounting practices of publicly traded companies during the 1982 recession.

The lawsuit said Stauffer improperly implemented a change in the way it accounted for its inventory, causing a material overstate-ment of $3.3 million in its 1982 in the fourth quarter of 1982. Stauffer prematurely recognized $72 million of revenue from its agricultural chemical "early order program," the lawsuit alleged, enng Stanffer to claim increased 1982 earnings of $26.7 million.

Finally, the suit charged, Stauffer's international division accepted certain shipments of inventories from the company's agricultural chemical division which were not based on firm customer orders, resulting in a $1.1-million overstatement of revenue.

In Westport, Stauffer said that its settlement with the SEC would cut earnings by a total $2.8 million. or seven cents a share, for 1982 and 1983, representing an overall decline of less than 3 percent. The company said the main effect of the change would be to shift earnings from 1982 to 1983.

France's Louis Vuitton Expands By Controlling Luggage Retailing

PARIS - Seven years ago, Louis Vuitton SA was a quiet, family-owned company known mainly for its distinctively monogrammed trunks, suit-cases and leather handbags. It had only two stores and about $17.5 million a year in sales.

Since then, a burst of sustained growth has established the 130-year-old company as a rising star of international retailing. When Louis Vuitton went public on the Bourse in June, eager investors snapped up more than one million of its shares. Demand was so intense, with 100,000 bids for each share offered, that the price quickly rose in the first few days to 525 francs ($60) from 465 francs as the stock sold our.

In the nine weeks since then, the stock has fluctuated in a range of 522 to 535 francs, with a high of 540. It closed Monday at 540 francs again, up from 536 Friday.

Given the company's impressive record, analysts say, the stock's performance so far has not been particularly spectacular. But Michael Stam, a Paris-based analyst with Banque Paribas, said that "very encouraging" first half results for Vuitton, due out soon, might prompt another rush to buy, boosting prices further. France's GDP Fell in Quarter; Base Rates Cut

PARIS - The French economy, after expanding strongly at the start of the year, shrank in the second quarter for the first time since 1982 as industrial production fell and imports rose, the National Statistics Institute said Monday.

Industry received some cheer, Monday that some French banks are cutting their base lending rates, the rate they charge their most favored customers, to 12 percent from 12,25 percent, effective Tues-

The gross domestic product, or GDP, the widest measure of economic performance, slipped 0.3 percent in the second quarter after a revised 0.9 percent first-quarter rise, up from a previously estimated 0.7 percent.

However the trend over the first six months taken as a whole remained positive, the institute add-

The government has been urging industry to invest in more modern equipment, a plea that appears to be having some impact. The figures show that the higher imports are due mainly to purchases by industry of capital goods.

The institute predicted last month that GDP growth over the whole of this year would be 1.4 percent, based on 1970 prices, double last year's 0.7 percent growth.

Banque Nationale de Paris, Socièté Générale and the Crédit Industriel & Commercial banking group all said they would cut their rates, but a spokesman for Credit Lyonnais said it had not yet decided whether to follow.

The base rate cut was the first by state-owned French banks since January last year, and followed three cuts in the Bank of France's money market intervention rate since early May as well as a base rate cut to 12 percent by Chase Manhattan Bank's French subsidiary last month.

The cut followed a one-percentage-point reduction in British base rates last week, which came even though the dollar and U.S. interest rates remain firm.

News of the cut had little effect on the French franc, which was quoted at around 8.93 francs to the dollar in late Paris trading, close to its record low of 8,98 reached in New York last week.

The French Finance Ministry also announced Monday that it is cutting government-controlled interest rates on most savings plans and Treasury bills by one percentage point to 6.5 percent effective Thursday, the first such cut since last August.

The interest rate on 18-month Treasury bills fell at Monday's Bank of France tender to 11 and 35/64 percent, from 11 and 58/64 percent July 18, money market

U.S. Steelmakers Assail Subsidies

By Paul Lewis
New York Times Service

BELLAGIO, Italy - The debate in the United States over foreign steel subsidies is beginning to center on one theme: that existing trade laws have failed to bring order to the steel market.

Neither recent U.S. legislation nor the General Agreement on Tar-iffs and Trade's 1980 code of conduct on subsidies has been able to bring about a lessening of tensions, steel experts say.

"It is ironic that world steel trade today is probably more encum-bered by nontariff barriers than ever, and more restraints are on the way," Charles O. Verril Jr., a trade lawyer with the Washington law firm Patton, Bloggs & Blow, said in a study presented at a recent meeting in Bellagio, a lakeside resort.

At the meeting, U.S. representa-tives presented themselves as innocent victims of a worldwide conspiracy by foreign governments and their steel companies to flood the U.S. market with cheap subsidized steel.

The foreign producers accused the U.S. industry of being badly managed and slow to adapt to a changing world where steel de-mand is dwindling, government in-volvement in industry is growing and new producers enjoy a competitive edge over older ones.

The conference was organized by the Washington-based International Law Institute, a research center specializing in trade and invest-ment law, "Lawyers are becoming nore and more involved in steel. xplained Professor Don Wallace r., the institute's director.

European producers, many of whom are openly subsidized by their governments, have agreed to limit their share of the U.S. market to 6 percent rather than face new legal restrictions. Japan, Mexico, South Africa, Brazil and Canada have also accepted export limits. But U.S. imports still rise and U.S. producers see secret subsidies wherever they look.

When In Tack Kim, executive vice president of South Korea's Po-hang Iron & Steel Co., said his partly state-owned company skipped dividends to finance new plant construction, and shopped around for subsidized credit from Western suppliers, the Americans cried foul.

When Mario Costa Braga, devel-opment director of Brazil's Siderbras-Siderurgia, noted that his country had to export steel to repay debts that the industry incurred in buying U.S. steelmaking technology, U.S. steel executives said this showed that Brazil would sell at any price.

The fact that many steel plants in developing countries are govern-ment-owned was frequently cited as evidence that they trade unfairly and should be penalized. In the U.S. industry's view, even countries U.S. industry's view, even countries laws and say Congress must impose with high import tariffs subsidize new quotas on all imports. their steel industry by keeping out foreign-made steel products.

The Dow Jones industrial average, down 9 at midday after falling 5.96 Friday, was down 1.66 to 1.216.43 an hour before the close. The Dow, which gained 16.01 last week, had climbed 131 points, or 12 percent, in less than three weeks after bitting a 17-month low on July 24.

Declines led advances about 9 to 5. The fivehour turnover was 62.5 million shares, down sharply from 159.4 million in the corresponding period Friday.

Analysts said that, considering the performance of the past 13 sessions, it was not surpris-ing that the market paused to reflect. Most were optimistic that the rally would resume soon.

"The market is tremendously overbought and due for a pause," said Jerome Hinkle of Sanford C. Bernstein. "There is nothing surprising about what is happening right now."

Tate's Bid for Brooke Bond Greeted Skeptically

LONDON - Sugar and tea may be natural companions in the typical British parlor, but mixing them in the City of London is proving to be another matter.

Nearly three weeks ago, Tate & Lyle PLC, Britain's largest sugar refiner, announced an unexpected offer to take over Brooke Bond Group PLC, the world's largest tea producer. Since then, the value of the bid, which is in cash and shares, has risen to the equivalent of about $420 million, from about $390 million, thanks to a rise in Tate's share price on the London Stock Ex-

Analysts immediately suggested that Tate was waiting to see whether it would need to release the figures in any effort to defend itself in a takeover threat. Sir John attributed the bid to "Tate's own problems" rather than commercial logic.

Tate, for its part, contends that Brooke Bond would be an "ideal partner." In its official statement mnouncing the bid, Tate said, The acquisition would represent a significant and exciting step towards the creation of a large international food group with strong market positions and efficient, lowcost production."

German Banks Protest to Bonn Over Tax Raids

FRANKFURT -- West German banks have protested to the federal and state finance and justice ministries over a series of raids by tax investiga-tors, saying they threaten the principle of bank secrecy.

in a letter dated July 24, the Central Credit Committee, which groups representatives of West Germany's major bank associations, said the raids "have not only aroused considerable doubt over the legal procedures used by investigating authorities, but could jeopardize the basis of trust between banks and their customers."

A copy of the letter was made available Monday by Rüdiger Philipowski, head of the tax de-partment of the German Cooperative Bank Association, which currently heads the com-mittee. He said in Bonn that raids could jeopardize bank secrecy. "We want to fire a warning shot," he added.

The complaint was triggered by a raid on a branch of Deutsche Bank in Düsseldorf on July 1, when eight tax investigators from the state of North Rhine-Westphalia briefly closed the bank to question employees and search bank records on customers.

People Express's Aim: Explosive Expansion

By Daniel F. Cuff New York Times Service

NEWARK, New Jersey - People Express Airlines is growing like a gawky teen-ager, bursting its seams. Overflowing its base in the old North Terminal of Newark International Airport, it is filling the skies with its planes.

That growth accelerated last week as the low-fare airline announced plans to extend its bus line in the sky with live round-trip flights a day to Chicago. That challenges the giant airlines United and American, which each have 24 round-trip flights a day between Chicago and the New York area. There were immediate forecasts of minous fare wars for the airline industry. The People Express fares

— $79 from 7 A.M. to 7 P.M. Monday through Friday and $59 at other hours - were about 70 percent below coach fares on the fullservice airlines. And the risk to People Express, taking on the established major lines, was evident. Analysts recalled other carriers whose swift growth overtook them: Braniff, Laker. Air Florida.

These failures, however, have given no pause to Donald C. Burr. the chief executive officer and founder of People Express. His philosophy is growth, and he wants eventually to put People Express planes in the skies the way McDonald's puts restaurants on the roads.

The airline expects delivery of 24 more planes by spring. That will give it 76 aircraft. People Express's formula of low-cost operations, in which extra charges are levied for such amenities as checked baggage and meals. allows profits on fares as low as one-third those charged by other airlines. But until now its success has come on peripheral routes where much of the competition is from small airlines.

People Express intensified the game when it began international service to London last year. Now it as Los Angeles, Houston and Min- earlier period.

neapolis-St. Paul, and on Aug. 22 it will begin the Chicago service.

"It does represent a change in strategy," said Alfred Norlin, an analyst at Kidder Peabody, "They had said they would try to avoid the head-to-head competition as much as they could, But considering the amount of airplanes they have bought, it's pretty clear they had to have that kind of expansion."

The move to Chicago was no surprise within the industry, said Robert Joedicke of Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb. It was known that People Express had obtained landing-right slots at Chicago's O'Hare aireort.

"What will happen has happened in many People Express markets, said an airline consultant who asked that his name not be used. "The total market is so stimulated by their low fares that. . . evervbody benefits."

United announced that it would match People's fares, with some restrictions, on Newark-Chicago flights, and charge $30 more than People on Newark flights with no restrictions. Recognizing the preference of many travelers for the United also offered fares as low as $79 on Chicago flights to La Guar-dia, Kennedy International, White Plains and Islip, New York.

American Airlines then announced that it, too, would match People's fares, with some restrictions. In addition, it decided to undercut United on flights to La Guardia, Kennedy and Islip.

People Express's low fares tap a market of new passengers. "They have taken people off the roads and out of buses. Mr. Norlin said. "They generate traffic."

But People Express's profits so far this year have not matched its performance in the first half of 1983. Net income in the first six months was $3.8 million, or 15 has added domestic service from cents a share, compared with $6.3 Newark to such major destinations million, or 37 cents a share, in the LONDON - No substantial strengthening of the British pound is likely until the 22-week-old coal miners' strike is settled, Lloyds Bank International said Monday in its Financial Outlook publication. The pound traded Monday in London at around $1.31. The Outlook predicted a mild firming of the pound toward the end of the year and early in 1985 in response to an expected weakening of the dollar. It projected the cur-tency to be trading at about $1.40 by the end of 1984. The publication said weakening world oil prices also had hurt the pound.

INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE, TUESDAY, AUGUST 14, 1984

Another Year of Growth and Development.

The Daimler-Benz balance sheet for 1983 shows, as in previous years, satisfactory results.

Worldwide sales rose by more than DM 1 billion to more than DM 40 billion. We thus maintained the upward trend of past years.

With a growth rate of more than 12 per cent, passenger cars accounted for the lion's share of the sales increase. The S-class models set a new record, thus emphasizing our leadership in the field of sophisticated automobiles.

The 190: New Market Potential.

The 190 class has been a success right from the beginning. Production limitations restricted the number of 190's available during the start-up period as demand outstripped supply. This was also true in the case of our other two passenger car model lines.

One especially encouraging aspect of the 1983 passenger car year was the large number of new owners attracted to Mercedes by the dynamic 190 series. We view the enormous positive response created by this series — which includes the brand-new 190 E 2.3–16 — as an important base for future growth.

Full-Line Producer of Commercial Vehicles.

By way of contrast, the commercial vehicle sector had to contend with deteriorating market conditions. Even the strong upswing in the German domestic market failed to compensate for the decline in export sales, particularly to the Near and Middle East. Despite this, Daimler-Benz was the only manufacturer of commercial vehicles able to avoid layoffs and short-time work in 1983. With a product line featuring our new light trucks, which range from 6.5 to 11 tons GVW, we expect to continue our leadership.

Daimler-Benz is the world's largest manufacturer of trucks over 6 tons GVW, and our product line, backed by our research and development work, our production technology and our sales organization, is expected to keep us in a competitive position in the international marketplace.

Our 1983 balance sheet is not only an account of positive development, but is also an expression of foresight and provision for the future.

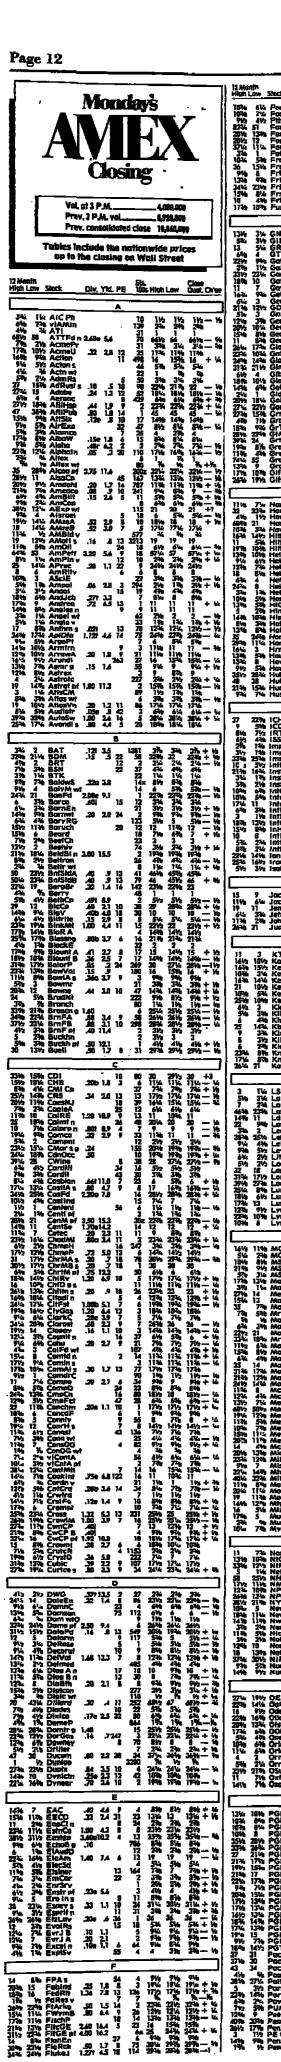

During the past year we invested DM 3.5 billion in product development and manufacturing facilities. We spent another DM 1.5 billion on research and development with an eye toward further improvement of our position as a technologically sophisticated auto manufacturer.

Although our industry is facing major challenges, these will not impair the future prospects for the motor car. This is particularly true for Mercedes-Benz vehicles, which have almost 100 years of tradition behind them.

We view our 1983 balance sheet as an important milestone on our road to the future.

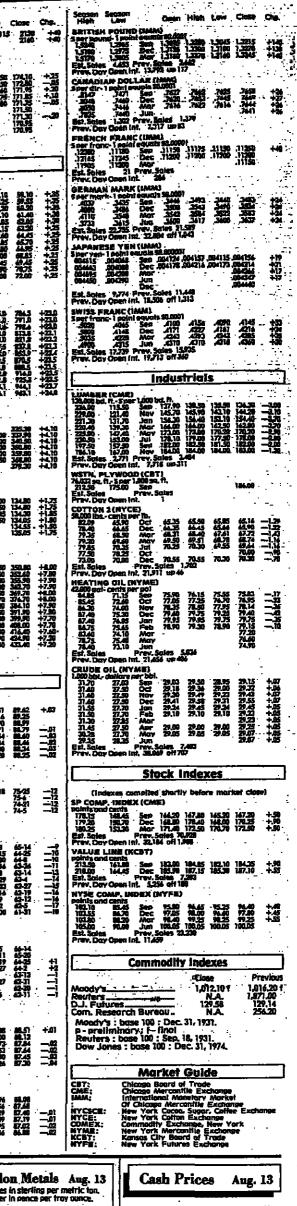

Daimler-Benz. Aktiengesellschaft.

To Discuss Strike Reuters

JOHANNESBURG — Gold mine workers and mine owners in South Africa are still deadlocked over wages, union and mine officials said Mouday. The dispute is in its second month, and the miners new these the right to extrice now have the right to strike.

Cyril Ramaphosa, general secretary of the National Union of Mineworkers, representing black miners, said that the union planned to discuss taking a strike vote now that the mandatory one-month cooling off period her serviced.

cooling-off period has expired.

The union, which says it has 70,000 members, is demanding a raise in excess of the increases—between 13.3 and 14.4 percent—that were paid to mine workers last month, Mr. Ramaphosa said.

NEW DELHI — The Indian
Navy is acquiring sophisticated submarines and an electronic underwater surveillance system because of new arms purchases by Pakistan and growing big-power revairy in the Indian Ocean, its defense minister said Monday.

S. B. Characa and Delicement that

S.B. Chavan told Parliament that the reason given by Pakistan for buying Harpoon missiles from the United States was "far-fetched." Pakistan has cited the Soviet military presence in Afghanistan bu Afghanistan does not have "ever one kilometer of coastline," he said.

The Soviet Union's defense minister, Dmitri F. Ustimov, agreed during his visit to New Delhi last. March to sell submarines and electronic countermeasures to India.

PANAMA ODYSSEY

R EMEMBER the Panama Canal treaties of 1978 and the bitter debates on whether the United States should "return" the canal to Panama? It is only a few years since the treaties went into effect, but they have already passed into oblivion. Ronald Reagan, who bitterly assailed Presidents Ford and Carter for their advocacy of the treaties, has said and done nothing about them since taking office.

In fact, Reagan warmly welcomed the president-elect of Panama, Nicolás Ardito Barletta, to the White House. As the Reagan administration struggles with its Central American policy, the solid relations between the United States and Panama, one of the side benefits of the treaties, are a major source of satisfaction to the administration. Imagine the administra-tion's problems, if in addition to El Salvador and Nicaragua, it also had to worry about protecting the Panama Canal against a hostile Panama.

William J. Jorden, a former correspondent for The New York Times, worked as a special assistant to President Johnson, who first tried to negotiate a new Panama Canal treaty in 1964. He was hired by Henry A. Kissinger as his Latin American adviser on the National Security Council in 1972, and was named by President Nixon as ambassador to Panama in 1974. He was kept on by Carter in 1977 and helped shepherd the treaties through Congress.
This first-hand experience at the center of the negotiations with Ambassadors Elisworth

Bunker and Sol M. Linowitz allowed Jorden to write a massive. Kissingerian memoir-history of the Panama Canal negotiations from 1964 to 1979. Jorden's book not only provides rich material on the events he witnessed first-hand from his vantage point in the White House and later in Panama, but also on the behind-thescenes activity from which he was excluded, such as the strategy sessions held by Omar Torrijos's government.

Like Kissinger's two volumes about his days in the Nixon White House (a third volume on the Ford White House is still to come), Jorden has woven personal anecdote, documentation and revealing detail into a highly readable, more-than-you-may-want-to-know book about the Panama treaties. For aficionados of diplomatic reporting however, this is the "sleeper" book of the year, which gives the reader one of the rare opportunities to be invited into a crucial set of negotiations. But more than that, it also goes into exhaustive detail on the bureaucratic maneuvering in Washington, showing how the Defense and State departments interact on something like the canal treaties, in which the Pentagon's inherent desire to retain its control over the canal and the State Department's desire to avoid trouble in Latin America, initially. clashed, but then were resolved when the Joint Chiefs of Staff concluded that it would not be worth the cost to have to delend the canal against an angry Panamanian population if the treaties were not signed. One of the more intriguing aspects of this book is its ability to penetrate the thinking and activities of the Panamanians. Most diplomatic memoirs reveal only a minimum of what the other side was up to. For instance, the spate of books dealing with the Russians can only guess, generally, at Soviet motivations. Who knows what Andrei A. Gromyko and Leonid I. Brezhnev talked about in preparing the way for the strategic arms agreements, for instance.

But the Panamanians, many educated in the United States, apparently decided that they wanted Jorden's book to be the definitive one on what obviously was the most important set of negotiations in Panama's history. Jorden acknowledged that the doors were open to him from Tornjos down. Thus, Jorden is like a former battlefield commander going back after the war to interview his opposing generals and finding out what their battle plans were at the

There were many strange and unusual turns in the Panama negotiations, in part because of the sensitivity of the issues to the two computers. Jorden is lavish in his praise of Johnson and Carter for their efforts on behalf of the treaties, with Carter receiving special praise for his decision to make the canal treaty the priority foreign-policy goal in his first months in

He provides details on why Ellsworth Bunker is considered the premier U.S. negotiator of the century, and he has taken the time to give play-by-play accounts of the problems faced and surmounted by the State Department and Panamanian lawyers. Jorden could probably have used a good editor to cut away excess anecdote and detail. But he clearly was determined to get everything he knew about Panama and the negotiations into the account, and for those who want to re-create what it was like in the negotiating room, this is the ideal book -

Olympic Games End With Ceremony,

New York Times Service

LOS ANGELES - There was singing and dancing. There were fireworks and a laser show and a 23,000-square-foot stage. There was a simulated flying saucer, sus-pended from a helicopter, with flashing lights that hovered overhead for a few minutes and then flew off.

There were athletes walking in arm in arm, undisciplined, happy and without regard to nation. Once inside, they started running round the track carrying flags and for a while ignoring announcements that they return to their places. There were athletes walking out the same way, obviously reluctantly.

Three hours after it began, it was over. The Olympic flame had burned so brightly 16 days in a cauldron atop the Los Angeles Coliseum, and now the flame had been extinguished. The Games of the 23d Ölympiad were over.

That was followed by the medal ceremony for equestrian individual show jumping, which ended earlier in the day.

After that, the 750-member All-American Olympic Marching Band marched in, and then came signbearers carrying the names of each participating nation, followed by a flagbearer from that nation. Following them were the athletes.

In the opening ceremony, the athletes from the 140 nations had marched in national groups. Sunday night, each nation supposedly was limited to six athletes; many, including the United States, had far more.

Baseball Hall Inducts 5

By Steven Crist

New York Times Service COOPERSTOWN, New York — The street signs said Cooperstown, but the feeling was more like Dodgertown here Sunday as Pee Wee Reese and Don Drysdale drew the loudest cheers of five former players who were formally inducted into the National Baseball Hall of Fame.

A crowd of several thousand baseball also cheered repeatedly as Luis Aparicio and Harmon Killebrew officially joined the sport's shrine, but the fans wearing faded blue Brooklyn Dodger jerseys rattled their noisemakers and honked their airhorns when Reese and Drysdale came up to the podium. Drysdale said his biggest thrill in baseball "had to-be that first day at Dodgertown in Vero Beach, my first day outside the those guys who had just been names in the paper, like Hodg-es, Reese and Campanella." The Dodger fans here were clearly of the Flatbush and not the Chavez Ravine variety, for there were boos when Drysdale mentioned Walter O'Malley, remembered by East Coast loyalists for moving the Dodgers to California. To witness the inductions of Reese, Drysdale, Aparicio, Killebrew and of Rick Ferrell, selected by the veterans' committee, baseball pilgrims had been crowding Cooperstown's streets since mid-morning, examining artifacts in the baseball museum and talking baseball along the tree-lined streets. They were experts. When returning Hall of Famers were introduced at the beginning of the induction ceremonies, fans yelled out their names after only a few words of introduction. like quiz-show contestants guessing the correct answer on the basis of as little information as possible. They were always right.

Twenty-eight previously-in-ducted Hall of Famers were on hand, including Ernie Banks, Burleigh Grimes (who turns 91 on Saturday), Al Kaline, Robin Roberts, Lefty Gomez and three former Dodger greats,

"Pee Wee was the man," Campanella had said before the ceremonies. "He made the club tick. He may have only been voted in now, but he was always in my Hall of Fame book."

Reese, the Dodger shortstop for 15 season in the 1940's and 50's and team captain for most of those years, was honored on the bronze plaque that will hang in the Hall for his "intangible qualities" of leadership. Reese, batted .269 in 2,166 majorleague games.

Pitcher Drysdale, who won 209 games and had 2,486 strikeouts for the Dodgers from 1956 to 1969, called being inducted the hall "very intimidating" but "also a day of Thanksgiving. Aparicio, cheered loudly by a small throng of supporters holding signs in Spanish, recalled that his first dream of ying U.S. baseball came when he was a batboy on his father's team in the Venezuelan leagues in the 1940s and met Campanella, who played there before baseball's racial barriers were broken later in the decade. Shortstop Aparicio set numer-ous fielding and stolen-base records for three American League teams from 1956 to Killebrew's speech was the longest and most emotional. The man who played with the nickname Killer and hit 573 home runs for the Washington Senators and Minnesota Twins, most ever in the American League by a right-hander, choked up several times recalling the encouragement of his late father and his 89-year-old mother.

Ferrell, who played with the St. Louis Browns, Boston Red Sox and Senators from 1929 through 1947, caught an American League record 1.806 games and was honored by the veterans' committee as a "durable, defensive standout."

The outgoing baseball com-missioner, Bowie Kuhn, presiding over the induction ceremonies for the 16th and final time, was given a gold lifetime pass to the Hall of Fame.

Pizza, 'Thriller'-Style

By Nancy Traver

MOSCOW — Waiters in high-heeled Italian boots serve bottles of imported red wine in the dimly lit restaurant. Well-dressed young customers at tables covered with red-and-white checked cloths listen to Michael Jackson's "Thriller" and enjoy Moscow's latest gastronomic craze - pizza, Soviet-

"It's difficult for young people in Moscow because there aren't a lot of bars and discos. The pizza parlors are somewhere we can go to make new friends," said one young woman in a pizza parlor.

For the average Muscovite, dining out is an occasion that requires patience and a large chunk of one month's salary. To ensure good ser-vice and a selection of the best the kitchen has to offer, it helps to know the maître d'.

But when the first pizza parlor in Moscow opened in February 1980 on Gorki Street, the city's busiest shopping thoroughfare, restaurantgoers had a new option.

Since then, the Rome-based company Italtrade has signed a $40,000 contract with the Soviet Ministry of Foreign Trade to supply, for 10 parlors, pizza ovens, chines to make pizza pans, dough kneaders and a course in pizza-making by an Italian chef. Several Yugoslavian and Finnish companies have opened others. Despite their popularity, Mos-cow's pizza parlors suffer the same kinds of shortages other restaurants do and have trouble finding the necessary pizza ingredients, ac cording to Maria Torrieri, spokeswoman for Italirade.

The shortages have produced some odd combinations, prompt-ing one Italian resident of Moscow to comment, "There really isn't much Italian left in these pizzas."

Because mozzarella cheese is not available. Soviet pizzas are made with sulgum cheese, a semi-soft white cheese from the southern republic of Georgia.

Wine imported from Naples and and customers sometimes have to choose between cognac or mango juice with their pizza.

Shortages of tomato sauce and quality and occasionally is topped oregano sometimes force the pizza parlors to remove pizza from their menus. Instead, they offer "calother typical Italian ingredients, zones" — large doughy popovers pizza parlors are especially popular stuffed with cheese and bits of

Despite the shortages and lone lines, the pizza parlors are popular because of their intimate, cozy atmosphere and moderately priced menus on which four persons can wine and dine for about 13 rubles, The better class restaurants offer meals at about 30 rubles ($36), onesixth of the average monthly wage of 180 rubles. Such restaurants attract large crowds and most establishments keep signs posted on their locked and guarded front doors that say "Mest Nyet" — no

Would-be diners in these establishments have been known to scuffle with door attendants, who usually open the doors only when a prospective customer can prove he has made reservations or is a for-

Dinner usually means five hours of eating, dancing and drinking until the government-ordered closing time of 11 P.M.

"It's a tradition in our culture that goes back hundreds of years," said a young Muscovite. "We go to restaurants not just to eat and talk, but to drink, listen to loud music, dance and forget our problems." The pizza parlors attract a more casual clientele and the atmosphere is more relaxed. Although the doors of pizza parlors generally are not locked, "No Space" signs are posted when they are crowded. People then wait in line to get in.

Zubin Mehta Talks About His Links to India, Israel

By Harold C. Schonberg New York Times Service

N EW YORK — Some years ago Zubin Mehta was quoted as saying that he would never conduct any orchestras in India or Russia, countries hostile to Israel Now he is taking the New York Philharmonic on a tour of the Far East, partly sponsored by Citi-bank, that will begin Wednesday in Tokyo and culminate with five concerts in Delhi, Calcutta and Bombay, ending Sept. 19.

Inconsistency? Change of heart? Mehta has been known to say things in the heat of the moment and then retract them. When he was music director of the Los Angeles Philharmonic he had some nasty words to say about the musicians of the New York Philharmonic, in effect charging them with being a spoiled bunch of prima donnas. nowhere near as good a group as. his. He would not marry the Philharmonic if it was the last orchestra on earth. Some years later he stood before them, an invited guest. He apologized handsomely —handsomely enough to become its leader not long after that.

[The Philharmonic on Friday canceled two performances in Malaysia because of the govern-ment's request that Ernest Bloch's Schelomo, a Hebrew Rhapsody for Cello and Orchestra" dropped from the program. The orchestra agreed Wednesday not to play "Schelomo," but changed its mind after outrage was voiced by U.S. Jewish organizations and government officials. "Schelomo" will be played at the other stops, including the cities in India.]

India, Israel, music and politics. He was excited about the trip. Born in Bombay 48 years ago, Mehta left when he was 18 10 study in Vienna. It was not until 1967 that he returned, as conductor of the touring Los Angeles Philharmonic. Since then he has visited India several times with his family. He popped off about India in

Recently Mehta, spoke about

1978, over disagreements between him and the Indian government about a tour with the Israel Phil-conductor. At that time he angrily Israel a people whose beliefs are said that he would never conduct close to those he learned as a in India until it recognized Israel.

Now he has calmed down a bit.
"I can't hold the New York Philharmonic responsible for my statements" he said "And when it came down to it. I could not conceive of an Asiatic tour without going to my own country."

Mehta's roots in Indian life and culture run deep. He described the forthcoming visit as "more disagree with Israeli nationalistic than religious, gue with the Israelis." though I am religious. My temples are only in India. When I am in India I go to the religious ceremonies. I am a Parsee, and we are brought up to practice the symbols. Our religion goes back to Zoroaster 4,000 years ago. He taught the difference between right and wrong, and it became the religion of the Persian em-

I love India," he said, "and it is important for my spirit to go back. I feel I belong so much. When I land in Bombay it's like I never left. I never even changed my passport, though I could have ome a Swiss citizen some years ago. Today there are about only 90,000 Parsees in the world. We are dwindling." Aside from his spiritual involvement, there is another reason that Mehta is eager to conduct in India. He wants to bring Western music there. India, unlike Japan or even the resurgent China, is not a country that has not shown much interest in Western classical music. It has few orchestras and has not produced instrumentalists or singers who figure in the international scene. But of one thing Mehta is positive, and that is the response of the Indian public to the music he is going to bring. He believes that Indians will respond to Beetho-ven, Wagner, Bach and the other composers he will be conducting. For many years Mehta has been much more allied profes-sionally to Israel than to his native country. The lifetime conductor of the Israel Philharmonic, he spends several month each year any major orchestra, contains 30 his scores. He has very few platthere and is constantly taking the or 40 players who think they can form mannerisms — certainly harmonic, of which he is lifetime orchestra on tour. He finds in Parsee.

"I first visited Israel in 1961, and I felt so much at home," he said. "It even looked like home. The people reminded me of my own people. They are like Parsees. They, like us, have kept a racial identity. Israel is my country, almost. I am so much a native there that I can be very critical. When I disagree with Israeli politics I ar-

Last year it was announced that

Mehta's contract with the New York Philharmonic had been extended to 1990. He has now been with the orchestra for seven years and has not been receiving a uniformly favorable press. It should be added that few Philharmonic conductors in recent decades have received a favorable New York press. Mehta's predecessor, Pierre Boulez, had a hard time of it. Before Boulez, Leonard Bernstein was the favorite whipping boy of the New York critics, who felt that the Bernstein ego was getting in the way of his music. And so back to Dimitri Mitropoulos and, in the 1930s, John Barbirolli.

Nobody, in or out of the New York Philharmonic, disputes Mehta's professionalism. But in many critical circles there is a feeling that he is more concerned with color and effect than with substance: that he can be inconsistent: that his strength is mainly in the big Romantic showpieces rather than in Beethoven and his

Nor have the Philharmonic players wholeheartedly accepted him. They like him well enough as a person. They admire his clear beat and general technique. He does have his supporters. But there are also those who feel that he is not particularly inspiring musically. Of course, it can also be said that the Philharmonic, like

"I know that some think him a rather superficial musician," says one respected figure who prefers to remain anonymous. "But the man is a real pro. And he is genuinely interested in the orchestra. Other conductors give the impression that they are interested only in their own careers. Mehta is committed. He has the ears of his-players; he personally attends all anditions when there is a vacancy

in the orchestra; he works well with management. He is a good man for the orchestra." Mehta shrugs his shoulders at criticism. He insists that honest criticism never bothers him. What he does not like is snobbishness in criticism. He thinks that too many critics are too eager to parade their knowledge, and he has little respect for that type. He knows, with mingled unitation and amusement, that many regard him as a glamour-boy conductor, and he cannot figure out why. He considers himself a serious musician who has mastered nothing along the podium acro-batics of a Leonard Bernstein. He always comes out soberly, does his stime, takes his bows and re-

"I spent 16 years in Los Angeles building up what I thought was a pretty good orchestra," he said. "I was too busy to be a glamour boy. But there were those reports about me, and those stories about the orchestra calling me Zubi, baby. Nobody ever called me Zubi, baby, and the writer who first used the expression later admitted to me that he had made it up. I don't have the time to be a glamour boy. I give five months a year to the Philharmonic, three months to Israel, do at least one new opera production a year and take a month off. In 1987 I will have a sabbatical for the calendar year and will con-duct the Philharmonic only on an American tour. Perhaps I can do more opera that year. I love to

Of his tenure at the New York Philharmonic, he said, "I would say that after seven years there is much more honesty between us. There is a more relaxed relationship. Everything is in the open. I believe that today I am at a stage where I can convince my orches tra of my musical ideas.

pleaded with reporters for "decency, decency, let her be alone in peace." Four men accompanying them used large umbrellas to shield Taylor from a few photographers.
When the party walked back to a chauffeured Mercedes that had brought her, the escorts scooped up dirt and rock and threw it at the press, witnesses said. At the request of Burton's family, Taylor stiged away from the funeral service and from a memorial service Satisfany in Pontrhydyfen, south Wales where he was born. Buffon's widow, Sally Hay, said Manday that she will remember him with a somebody who lowed the within word. "Although my life with Righard was brief it was a furnishing." ard was brief it was of minantial quality." she said in a statement issued to the British domestic he agency, Press Association. She married Burton 13 months before his death. Edward Fox, who gained fame in "The Day of the lackal," will take over the role written for Burton in "Wild Geese II,". the distributors have announced. Fox, who has also been in "A Bridge Too Far" and "Gandhi," will join the director, Peter Hust, and the cast on location in Berlin.

The hopes of former Miss America Vanessa Williams to sing in Jo-seph Papp's coming production of "La Bohème" in New York have hit a sour note. "She apparently has some commitments that just don't jibe with our project," Merle Debuskey, a spokesman, said. Wilhams, who relinquished her crown last-month after Penthouse magazine published sexually explicit photos of her, had auditioned for the part of Musetta. Papp said after the audition that "she has a very nice voice." Williams is to appear in an episode of NBC's "Partners in Crime" and has been offered a guest role on ABC's "The Fall Guy."
